

Nineteen-Thirty-One

This spring air surely affects one. These Applied Arts girls have been watching musical comedy practice, and are now trying out some new steps they saw. If the weather were not so nice they would all be inside Swift Hall messing with paint and glue and clay. Reading from left to right a general let-down can be noticed

If the trees were bigger, we could not see these women from the Applied Arts College. The trees are part of President Schneider's scheme to beautify the Engineering Quadrangle. After they get bigger, and after the hedges, which have also been planted, get bigger, the scenery will be quite pretty. But by that time, school will be out, and girls will be playing around trees in the north woods

Applied Arts Co-Eps

The boys in the Applied Arts school are too busy dreaming over designs for castles, garages and Rathskellers to dream much about love and spring and hooley

Allan Wash, sometime comedian of the Fresh Painters, is busily engaged in designing a non-squeaking sofa coaster, while Bill Reist, Don Juan from Dayton, is out in Burnet Woods with the Thetas
