

TRACK

The 1930 track season brought only limited success to Cincinnati, thus following the rather unenviable example of recent years. The material as a whole was only average and competition in Buckeye ranks proved too keen for Varsity's cinder artists. Injuries and illness also hurt Varsity greatly. In spite of these handicaps, the squad worked hard all season.

The season began with an indoor dual meet at Athens. Ohio's Bobcats won, scoring 54 points of a possible 91. Weakness in the weight events, together with Ohio's superiority in the middle distances, tipped the scale in the Athensonian's favor.

Varsity next traveled to Kentucky and rode roughshod over Georgetown's imposing number of firsts and seconds, and was never in danger. Carney, Popp, Knisely and Marshall turned in impressive performances for the Bearcats.

In the second dual meet between Cincinnati and Ohio University, the lads from eastern Ohio again won, 78½-58½. This meet proved to be practically a repetition of the first one, with the Bobcat harriers again superior in the weight and middle distance events.

Miami manhandled Cincinnati at Oxford. Miami took all but two first places with Bursiek capturing the high and low hurdles for Cincinnati. The Big Red representatives turned in several record-smashing performances, most spectacular of which was Vossler's shot-put of over 45 feet. The Cincinnati boys fought gamely, but Miami was far too powerful. The score was, Miami 102, Cincinnati, 29.
