

WILLIAM WALLACE HEWETT, Ph.D.
Dean of the College of Liberal Arts

Our youngest dean, William Wallace Hewett, came to the University only a little over a year ago. It is very commendable that he has been elevated to the position of Dean of the Liberal Arts College in such a short time. He has taken a position in the faculty as a noteworthy young economist.

Dr. Hewett is a graduate of Swarthmore College and a protege of Raymond T. Bye, of Pennsylvania fame. He collaborated with Dr. Bye in writing "Applied Economics." He also wrote "Rudiments of Economics" for use in the night school.

In the capacity of dean he has made many improvements in the administrative efficiency of the University. He inaugurated spring registration and changed the number of advisors from fifty to twelve.
