

"Fare Thee Well"

While your playing days are gone forever at the University of Cincinnati, your accomplishments will remain eternally in the hearts and minds of your fellow students who saw you time and again perform so nobly for your Alma Mater.

Captain Clifford Goldmeyer, never will we, who have seen you perform, forget your deadly tackles, your long punts that time and again saved the game and at times turned seeming defeat to victory, your calm running of the team, your undying spirit, nor your gentlemanly qualities. Your team mates, those men who knew you best, elected you as their honorary captain, for which we offer our congratulations.

Bob Lewis, you modest, unassuming "Little Napoleon," we know you to be the least-publicized regular member of the team, and yet a whole line by yourself. Such is your nature, but the coaches and players knew your sterling worth, and we bid you adieu with Coach Woodworth's remark that you were good enough to make any Big Ten Team in the Country, and probably All-American Guard.

So long, "Whitey" Lunsford, we know we won't see you play any more football on Carson Field, but if you, as coach, bring any of your teams to play U. C., we will see in your players that indomitable will to play the game for all it's worth, that you exemplified during your football career on Carson Field.

Good-bye, Johnnie Herman, and good luck. When bigger and better football players come to school, we hope your sons will take up where you left off. It was truly unfortunate that an ankle injury kept you on the side lines during the early season games, for we believe that you would have made the All-Buckeye team hands down if you had been available for all games. Your finale in the Miami game will linger forever in our memories and in those of your honorable opponents whom you attacked so accurately and deadly.

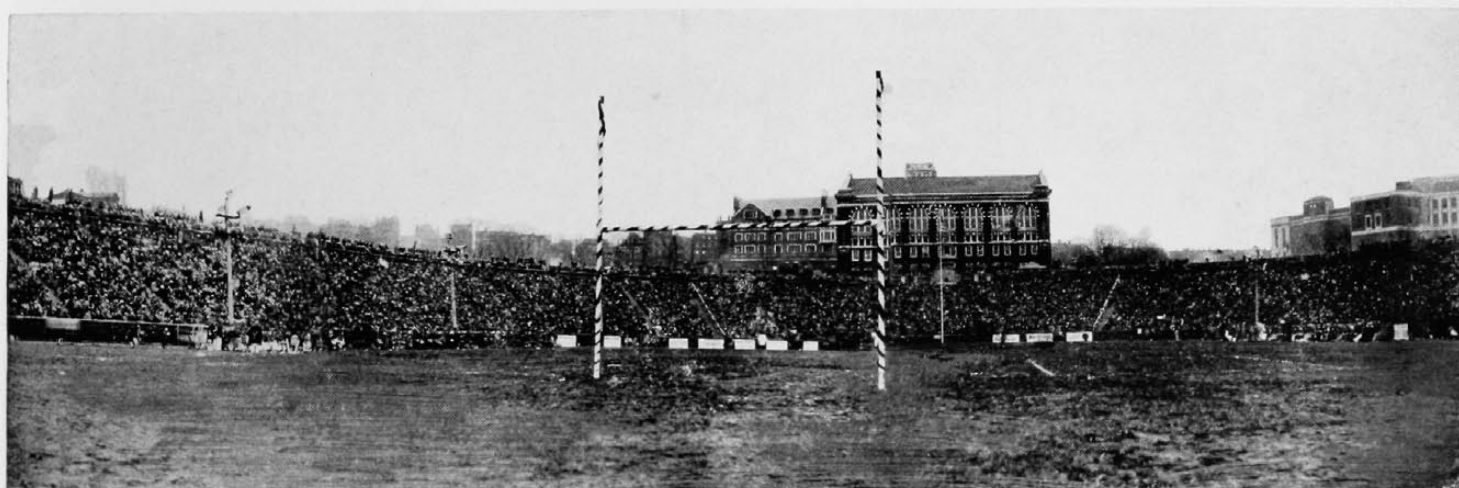

To you, Tom Stueve, we offer our heartfelt gratitude for plugging during three seasons under the direction of three different head football coaches. Men like you make for championship teams. You were never a quitter; hence we know you will succeed in whatever field of life you choose.
